Randy Muir, Muir Enterprises, LLC.

I am an all-natural small scale commercial beekeeper whose operation gets inspected by the VADACS each January or February. I apply the principle of selective breeding to move my genetics toward innate varroa resistance. I also select for gentleness, honey production and ability to overwinter at 2150 ft elevation in Pulaski Co. Only colonies which testing shows cannot manage varroa on their own get treated and then are only treated with gentle organic compounds. When the season allows, non-resistant queens are replaced with daughters of resistant queens. Granted, this approach requires considerable time, effort and record keeping.

I sell only deep frame nucs, and they are available in whatever number of frames you would like to purchase. All queens are <1 year old and marked. A small deposit gets you on the Spring nucs list, and that list is usually full by March.

I prefer to move your nuc into your equipment before your very eyes, so you can see everything you are getting. Conversely, 'nucs in a box' can be arranged also.

Apiary location is 7320 Cherry Branch Rd, Radford, VA

We are now taking orders for 5 frame nucleus colonies for Spring 2026. Over wintered nucs with a marked queen for $175 each. These Nucs should be available, weather permitting, around the 18th of April. We should also have Spring Nucs with a marked queen for sale from mid May through the beginning of June. The queens are local survivor stock.

Limited availability for all Nucs. Local pick up only in Willis or Cana, Virginia.

Nucs come in a Jester Nuc box, Pro Nuc box, or on site we can place the colony in your equipment.

I will offer a free short bee course at the Willis or Cana apiary. The class consists of going over the frames and explaining what you are looking at, which is great for the new beekeeper.
